

Beeronomics: The Economics of Beer & Brewing

By Jo Swinnen, Liesbeth Colen and Thijs Vandemoortele

This paper summarizes key findings from the first ever conference on the economics of beer and brewing. It presents a historical perspective and also identifies important recent developments in global markets, in terms of changes in production, consumption, variety, quality as well as in terms of the industrial organization of the beer market and the brewing companies, and regarding public policy trying to regulate the market.
